[redacted] et al,

Hope all is well at the PRB. As you may recall, about this time last year I submitted some broadly drafted documents outlining the sorts of areas I was thinking of covering in a proposed memoir of my career. After PRB approved release, I provided them to my agents at [redacted]. Since that time, based on advice and guidance by [redacted] I have been working (albeit sporadically) on a more detailed package that [redacted] could circulate to potential publishers.

Obviously, from my standpoint the sooner the PRB can get to this the better. I am anxious to get the proposal finalized so I can gauge, more than a year after my retirement, the extent of interest by publishers out there. That said, I am quite cognizant of the PRB's competing workload demands and the care it must devote to its reviews.

Please keep me posted on your process. I am happy to answer any questions you may have, of course.
